Colt Mackenzie McNair expands its global operations with the opening of a new Hong Kong office to serve the Far East market

A significant and growing demand from the golf industry for high quality candidates in Asia allows CMM to expand its operations and locate a permanent office in the Far East

Colt Mackenzie McNair (CMM), the specialist executive search firm operating exclusively in the golf market and with a strong reputation in Europe, Asia and the Middle East, has opened a new Hong Kong office to serve the day-to-day requirements of the burgeoning Far East golf industry.

The Hong Kong office – led by Tim Orgill, CMM's new Principal Consultant, Asia – has been created to serve businesses, developers, golf clubs and resorts in the region who consistently struggle to attract quality candidates.

Richard Wood, Director of Colt Mackenzie McNair, said: "The creation of CMM Asia is an essential step in the development of our global business strategy and I'm sure this news will be welcomed by organisations in Asia, who clearly require help from a team who understand the local golf market and have a strong grasp of the native languages.

"We are lucky to have someone like Tim with a strong pedigree in golf. He is well known throughout the region and already has an enviable network of contacts. We are fully committed to developing a world-class business in the Far East and with Tim at the helm, we know we will deliver huge value to the Asian golf market."

Tim Orgill added: "Asia is the fastest growing region in the world and there is a strong demand for high calibre business professionals who have experience of the golf and hospitality industries. Having the office in Hong Kong will give CMM a clear market advantage and undoubtedly offer clients and candidates a premium recruitment service."
